- The processor uses the bus to send the disk a location in memory and request a read operation
- Disk device performs all steps required, including moving bytes into memory, and interrupts only after the operation completes

Figure 16.8 The interaction between a processor and a smart disk device when reading a disk block.